Call for Papers

The Journal of Financial Markets and Governance (JFMG) aims to publish rigorous, insightful and original manuscripts on topics related to broader finance and governance-related issues. JFMG seeks to consolidate its position as a premier outlet for exchange of knowledge and dissemination of research for academics, industry stakeholders and policy makers.

2021 marks the golden jubilee of the Independence of Bangladesh and JFMG wishes to launch its first official issue highlighting the economic prosperity and financial sector development of Bangladesh – a fast-growing emerging economy which is often cited as the next Asian Tiger. In the past 50 years post-independence, from a war torn country afflicted with poverty and starvation, Bangladesh has become one of the world’s wonder economies in the world. In order to sustain the momentum of growth, the role of financial markets is considered to be a critical underpinning, providing sources of capital for investments and infrastructure development.

The journal aims to publish its first issue focusing on, (but not limited to) on the “Role of Financial Markets for Economic Development/Growth”. JFMG calls manuscripts from academics and industry stakeholders from across the world in the areas of financial markets and institutions, financial reporting, accounting, accountability and governance, alternative financing mechanisms etc. for contribution to the first issue of the journal. The contribution can be in the form of Original Article, Industry Notes, Review Article, and Book Reviews.

Following are the cut-off dates related to the manuscript submissions:
